

THE LEGACY COURSE

Another worthy challenge is the par-5 eighteenth hole. Reminiscent of the esteemed sixth hole at Congressional Country Club -- also a Rees Jones project -- this 540-yard nemesis takes the player through the saddle of a ridge and downhill to an enticing green protected by a lake. The finishing hole provides a real risk-reward test for those who brazenly attempt to reach the green in two shots.

Designed to accommodate both member and PGA tournament play, The Legacy is destined to become a heavyweight among championship courses. Like its predecessor, the Legacy also provides a full compliment of practice facilities.

- A beautiful starting par 4. A tee shot in the center or left side of the fairway will leave you a mid to short iron into the green which has two tiers and deep bunkers right and left. Club selection is important, especially when the pin is back.
- the bunker to get close. Water, water everywhere. This green is 25 yards A chance to make birdie or double bogey. Tee deep and most players have a short to mid iron shot. There is leave a mid to short iron to a room to miss the green long if you hit too much club, but the water can be rather intimidating.
- The first of Legacy's strong par 5s. Avoid the bunkers along the right side. Judging distance on your approach to the green is difficult because of the creek and bunker complex around the green. Toughest pin position is on the left side behind the bunker.

- The elevated tee provides a great start to this par 4. The fairway bunker can be carried by only the longest hitters. Club selection is key as the green is almost 40 yards deep. Toughest pin is back left. Any approach from the left side of the fairway will have to carry
- shots between the bunkers will green guarded by a creek around the front and right and a bunker left. Toughest pin is back left on the shelf.
- The tee shot must be in the center left side of the fairway, otherwise, you are blocked by trees for your second shot. A lay-up even with the first bunker will leave you with about 80-90 yards to a large green. A back right pin over the bunker presents a challenge

- Play this hole wisely. Layup off the tee to about 80-100 yards. Leave yourself a full wedge uphill to a green with bunkers front and right. A pin tucked at the front right of the green will require some precise wedge play to get the ball close.
- A picturesque par 3 you can't afford to miss right, left or long. Pins in the back right and left near the bunkers present the toughest tests.
- A great finish to the front nine, this hole doglegs slightly to the right. Favor the left center of the fairway off the tee. Hit a mid to long iron into this large green divided by a swale that sits left of center. The toughest pin position is back left.

- A great driving hole with a demanding second shot; especially if the pin is placed left over the bunker. Tee shots favoring the center and right side will provide a better approach to the green, which is slightly elevated and falls off around
- Trouble lurks around the entire right side of this long, narrow par 5. There is more room in the landing area than appears. Second shots up the left side to about 100 yards leave a full wedge to a green bordered by bunkers. Toughest pins are in the back and left. Going over this green is not an option.
- A long, uphill par 4. Your approach shot will be to a green that appears very narrow. Shots missed in the right bunker or to the right of the bunker will be very difficult to get up and down. Par is a great score.

- The green on this hole has three distinct levels. A shot which stops on the correct level could result in a birdie. Shots on the wrong part of the green will require some skillful putting. There is more room on the left side of the green than it appears.
- Avoiding the bunkers off the tee is the first challenge of this downhill par 4. A greenside lake right and a large bunker left await errant shots. The green is long and narrow, and angles back to the right. A back right pin is very challenging.
- You can't afford to miss the fairway on this good driving hole. Use a mid to short iron on the second shot. The green has a large swale in the middle. The left front half of the green is guarded by a large bunker. Toughest pin location is back left
- Club selection is a challenge on this downhill par 3 which can play over 200 yards from the back tees. A good shot is rewarded with a birdie opportunity, but less into this large green

This par 5 is a threeshot hole for most players. For longer hitters, going for the green on your second shot requires a wellstruck long iron or fairway metal. This small green has water in front. A great finishing hole for a great golf course.
