On Going Through A Transition Year After Having Successful Seasons

It was definitely frustrating. When you go through the season you try to take it one game at a time- just going from one week to the next. But at the end of that season it was hard to look back on it. It hurt to look back on what we had done. From that point on we met as a team and decided if we wanted to do the same things and have the same outcome, or if we wanted to become something else. So that's what we did, and we set goals to become a better and new team.

Thoughts Looking Into The Opening Game Of The Season Against Western Kentucky

We're very excited about the opening game. I know Western Kentucky is a high power team, can score a lot of points, but we're excited about where we are as a team right now and where we will be come September 3 when we play them.

On Last Year's Season

It's definitely not a season that we wanted to go through, but nonetheless it happened. We look back at that and it was hard to look at, and we all decided that was not something that we wanted to be a part of. I've been a part of many different teams with different identities and that was not an identity that I liked last year or anybody else did. We decided to create a new identity and be a new team this year.
