Senior Offensive Lineman Bradley Bozeman

On the overall experience of SEC Media Days...

"It's an awesome experience, to be selected by my coaches to represent my teammates. There's a lot of guys that deserve to be up here to represent the University of Alabama football team, and I'm blessed that I'm here."

On how Alabama has been able to maintain their level of success...

"There's a lot of hard competitors on our team, and with Coach Saban, we focus on the process. We push every day and we try to be 1-0 at the end of every week. We try to do things that other people don't want to do or can't do. We just push it, break down barriers, and knock down walls."

On the competition between Alabama's running backs and the depth at the position...

"There's one ball, so you have to come out there and compete every day. Whoever deserves to be out there is going to be out there. It doesn't matter about your background, it doesn't matter about anything else except how you compete."

On who is stepping up in the departure of Jonathan Allen...

"The whole defensive line has stepped up. They're trying to push it, all trying to get that starting spot. Every competitor wants to start, that's your goal when you come to Alabama or wherever you go. We've had a lot of young guys that are pushing it and trying to get there."

On Jalen Hurts' progression throughout the offseason...

"Our offense has come out clicking. It's not about just the quarterback, or just the running back, or just the line. It's about the whole unit. It's about the whole machine. If one part isn't running right, the whole thing's not running. It's not just one aspect."
