SEC TOURNAMENT FORMAT HISTORY

Years: 44th tournament in 2020

Total Games Played: 551

1977–1986
From 1977–1986, the tournament consisted of four teams competing in a double elimination bracket. The winner was considered the conference's overall champion.

1987–1991
In 1987, the tournament expanded to 6 teams, while remaining a double-elimination tournament. Beginning with the 1988 season, the winner was no longer considered the conference's overall champion, although the winner continued to receive the conference's automatic bid to the NCAA Tournament. In 1990, however, the conference did not accept an automatic bid after lightning and rainfall disrupted the tournament's championship game and co-champions were declared.

1992
With the addition of Arkansas and South Carolina to the conference, the SEC held an eight team double elimination tournament. The tournament followed a format that included reseeding the teams once only four were still active in the tournament.

1993–1995
The SEC held separate tournaments for the Eastern and Western divisions in 1993, 1994 and 1995. The tournament games counted in the league standings, and the team with the best winning percentage at the end of each tournament, covering 24 regular season SEC games plus tournament games, was crowned league champion. Each division tournament consisted of all six teams in that division. The SEC devised the plan in the hopes of garnering two automatic berths to the NCAA tournament for each of the tournament champions; however, the NCAA rejected the SEC plan, instead awarding one automatic bid to the division tournament champion with the highest overall winning percentage.

1996–1997
For two years, eight teams qualified for the league tournament; however, the teams seeded fifth through eighth were forced into a single-elimination play-in round. The two winners of the play-in games advanced to the main bracket, which was a six-team, double-elimination format, exactly the same as the NCAA regional format used through 1998.

1998–2007
Starting in 1998, the SEC adopted the "Omaha" bracket, splitting the eight qualifying teams into two four-team double elimination brackets. The division winners are seeded 1 and 2, while the remaining six teams are seeded 3 through 8. Seeds 2, 3, 6 and 7 form bracket one, while seeds 1, 4, 5 and 8 are in bracket two. The two bracket winners meet in a winner-take-all championship game. This was the format used in the College World Series from 1988 through 2002, prior to the NCAA instituting a best-of-3 championship series in 2003.

In 1998, the top three teams in each division plus the next two teams with the best winning percentage qualified for the tournament. In 1999, the qualification standards were changed to the top two teams in each division plus the next four teams based upon overall conference winning percentage, which remains in place through 2008. Since 1996, SEC teams have played 30 conference games (10 3-game series), with each team playing all of its division opponents and four of seven opponents from the opposite division.

2008–2011
In 2008, the SEC adopted a "flipped bracket" on a trial basis. The tournament still consisted of 8 teams in a double elimination bracket. However, after two days of play the undefeated team from each bracket would move into the other bracket. This reduced the amount of rematches teams would have to play in order to win the tournament.

2012
With the addition of Texas A&M and Missouri for 2013, the SEC expanded the tournament from 8 to 10 teams.

2013–present
The 2013 format saw another expansion by two teams, bringing the total number of participants to 12. Seeds five through 12 play a single-elimination opening round, followed by the traditional double-elimination format until the semifinals, when the format reverts to single-elimination.
